Reflection's hour !-- to few 'tis known. To these, the chosen time, how dear! To retrospection consecrate It is the heart's alone.

I will not on its hoards intrude, Nor tell how fancy riots there; Suffice it, that to Misery's child Is known the holy time.

Then memory wanders, and the forms Of days, departed, hover near; Then childhood's smile and childhood's sigh Dissolve the soul again.

How fair the visions, boyhood knew! Hope strewed the way with thornless flowers Past joys, recalled, seem more than joys, Past sorrows seem like bliss;

I envy not the man Who shuns reflection's hour.

TOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

To those who may have reason to felicitate them selves on their application, the following verses may prove an acceptable though imperfect of-

I've oft to thee confess'd, love, The pure and ardent flame That burn'd within my breast, love, And thou didst own the same; Like beaven's enkindling ray, love, his radiance round us spread, To light our op'ning way, love, Where youth and pleasure led.

I priz'd thee most sincere, love, My passions earliest vow Was breath'd with hallow'd fear, love, Lest thoud'st forget it now: Thy kind and gentle heart, live, Tho' warm with purest truth, Might with that jewel part, love, Where pleasure tempted youth.

The glorious sun on high, love, More constant can't pursue His course throughout the sky, love, Than is my heart to you; And like that sun it beams, love, With warm affection's fire, And rapture on it gleams, love, As of thy smiles inspire.

And I have prov'd thee fond, love, Through chequer'd scenes of woe, All other bliss beyond, love, To know and feel thee so, To know that thou art mine, love, The treasure of a heart That sooner would resign, love, This life than with thee part!

SONNET-TO *****.

Say, shall we meet again, With smiles of mutual gladness; O: shall we e'er remain Apart, in anxious sadness? When last we bid farewell, My heart was fill'd with sorrow, Yet Hope seem'd proud to tell We part, to meet to-morrow.

The morrow's sun arose, But Hope, I found, deceiv'd me, For twilight's ling'ring close With no kind news relieved mefoft, in memory's dreams, Live o'er again those hours, When social pleasure's beams Charm'd with their witching powers.

Yet in that pleasing view, Which memory's oft revealing, The pain of our adieu Seems o'er my bosom stealing. For moments thus gone by May pass-alas !- forever, And like a farewell sigh Our fondest joys may sever.

Our dearest hopes are vain, They smile but to deceive us, And leave us worlds of pain With no balm to relieve us-Oh! let us meet once more, Or if thy beart say-never,-Adieu !- our friendship's o'er-We're parted, then-forever. Sept. 20th. 1822.

WOMAN'S LOVE.

A woman's love, deep in the heart, is like the violet flower, That lifts its modest head apart in some sequester'd bower; And blest is he who finds that bloom, Who sips its gentle sweets; e heeds not life's oppressive gloom, Nor all the care he meets!

A woman's love is like the spring Amid the wild alone, A burning wild, o'er which the wing Of clouds is seldom thrown; And blest is he who meets that fount

Beneath the sultry day; ow gladly should his spirits mount! How pleasant be his way! A woman's love is like the rock

That every tempest braves,
And stands secure amid the shock,
Of ocean's wildest waves;
And blest is he to whom repose
Within its shade is given;
The world with all its cares and woes,
Seems less like earth than heaven.

MORAL AND RELIGIOUS.

THE HOUSE OF MOURNING While travelling through a lonely forest of the western country, I came to a solita-ry cottage, partly shaded by stately trees. On my arrival at the door, I knocked upon the post; a person stepped forward; drew aside a blanket that served as a door, and bade me come in: I went in, sat upon a bench, and reclined against the side of this rustic dwelling; when, looking round me, lo! it was the house of mourning.

There, in one corner, on a bed of straw, in benumbed death's chill embrace, lay the wasted remains of an affectionate husband and protecting parent. A melancholy sen-sation unavoidably pervaded my mind.— But a few hours since, his mortal existence rose on soaring ideal pinions to Him who

Yes—he is progressing in that measure-less journey from which "no traveller reng pleasures, and gone far, far from this tabernacle of mourning-No more shall he groan under the racking pains of sickness; no more shall the sorrows of this woe-worn world canker his felicity.

While thus reflecting on a sublime futu-rity, a neighbor entered this solemn and silent house of death; he recalled my mind to the gloom of mortality: I again looked round on the members of this sorrowing family. Here sat a weeping companion, absorded in the profusion of grief: holding a smiling infant that had not yet learned its own mortality, or realized the bitter dregs of human woe. There leaned a child against the chimney corner, and oft turned her eyes towards her lifeless father, while a filial tear would trickle down her tender cheek. All, all seemed as living monuments to declare the event of death; and, though mantled in silence, yet they manifested a realization which no tongue

Having rested a short time, I rose and went out. It was the Sabbath; the sky was clear, and the sun had passed the meridian-I again resumed my journey, and as I walked along through the little opening that encircled the rustic domicil, and looked on the labor of him whose body was now mouldering away, to mingle with the lancholy contemplation—that all the works of our labor will soon know us no more for ever; and as I entered the lonely woods, whose leafy trees shaded my path, methought I was entering the "valley and shadow of death." And while recollection recals to my mind the joys and sorrows I have seen, I shall never forget the house of VIATOR. mourning.

FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

When we reflect upon the value of reputation and character-the dangerous liability we are constantly under of losing it, and the extreme difficulty of regaining it after it is once forfeited, we cannot be too vigilantly careful in preserving such an inestimable jewel. In this we are the guardians of our own happiness, and we shall find, that "he who stumbles, falls, who falling finds none to help him." and if he is even favoured by time to make atonement by good conduct for his former errors, still, the remembrance of them will rise like departed ghosts before him-he will recollect them with pain, and the uncharitable will sometimes reproach him, if not openly at least with sarcastic sneers and unmanly insinuations. And, although the good and wise, will cast the mantle of forgiveness over his failings, his own heart will still reproach him, and destroy that confidence which is ever the shield of innocence. He will be tempted to quit the circles where he is known, because he knows not to what extent a censorious world may extend their prejudices against him-he will be induced to banish himself from the society of his former acquaint-self, and happy will he be if he so profit or by even a venial error, has forfeited the good opinion of his neighbours, instead of making his defence by a vain attempt to cover and palliate his guilf, he would act more wisely to acknowlege his fault with humility, and endeavour by future good conduct to conciliate the esteem of his fellow citizens—for mankind are always slow to believe what a man has to say in extenuation of his own faults, and it often happens that the more vigorous his defence is, the more firmly his guilt is fixed upon humility, and endeavour by future good is, the more firmly his guilt is fixed upon RECLUSE.

FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST. THE SOLITAIRE-No. IV.

"Of all human actions, pride seldom obtains ts end; for aiming at honour and reputation, is reaps contempt and derision" MONTAIONE Pride is one of those vices which people generally overlook, because they all par take of its influence. It is, nevertheless, a demon of a very base kind. It is a principle which ought to be held in the greatest abhorrence, and cast from the breast as a viper with a deadly sting. Under the dominion of pride we serve the devil, trembling on the verge of dissolution—at for where it exists, neither virtue, religion, length, dropped into the vapory oblivion nor morality, can abide. As, therefore, nor morality, can abide. As, therefore, of unknown; and his immortal existence these only ought to influence the mind, so every particle of pride should be rooted out, and "meek-eyed humility" cherished in its stead. It is not the pride of dress turns;" he has left his relations and chang- that I would have in view, neither is it a pride of excelling in virtue or learning; but it is an overbearing spirit which will trample upon the poor, the meek, or the ignorant-destroy their rights, and heap up a pile of injuries when a fountain of blessings ought to rise in view. It is a pride which fills the possessor with conceited notions of his own excellence, and makes him consider all other mortals beneath him. It is a pride which, with an ocean of vices, aspires to the perfection of deity, and aims at a throne which it never was intended man should ascend. It is a pride with which Lucifer himself was possessed, when he attempted to overthrow the throne of Grace, and rise superior to the "great first cause." Like Lucifer, too, will the fall of that spirit be, who possesses the vice just mentioned. For a while fortune may smile upon his vanity, and success crown his views; but in the end he will find his doom irrevocably fixed, and finally cast beneath the most abject of those whom in his prosperity he did not deign to look upon. Humility is the princommon elements of our mother earth, I ciple intended for us; it is a heavenly was again wrought up in pleasing and me- principle; it sheds a lustre on human na- the criticism of persons of acknowledged never-fading joys.

A PRETTY STORY.

The late Earl of Exeter had been divorced from his first wife, a woman of fashion, and of somewhat more gaiety of manners than "lords who love their ladies like."-He determined to seek out a second wife in a humbler sphere of life, and that it should be one who having no knowledge of his rank, should love him for himself alone. For this purpose, he went and settled incognito (under the name of Mr. Jones) at Hordnet, an obscure village in Shropshire He made overtures to one or two damsels in the neighborhood, but they were too knowing to be taken in by him. His manners were not boorish, his mode of life was retired, it was too odd how he got his livelihood, and at last, he began to be taken for a highwayman. In this dilemma he turned to Miss Hoggins, the eldest daughter of a small farmer, at whose house he lodged. Miss Hoggins, it might seem, had not been used to romp with the clowns: there was something in the manners of their quiet, but eccentric guest, that she As he found that he had inspired liked. her with that kind of regard which he wished for, he made honorable proposals to her, and at the end of some months, they were married, without his letting her know who he was. They set of in a post-chaise from his father's house, and travelled across the country. In this manner, they arrived at Stamford, and passed through the town without stopping till they came to the enavenue of trees that leads up to the front of this fine old mansion.—As they drew nearer to it, and she seemed a little sur-

PUBLIC MEETING.

And over Fashion's votaries wield the sceptre." In pursuance of public notice, a numerous and splendid meeting of our female Corinthians and tippy Exquisites, convened at Dandy Hall on the evening of the 19th inst. in order to devise some scheme whereby the dresses and appendages of Fashion should be subjected to ture, makes it acceptable to the Creator, taste in the beau monde before they were exhibited to the gaping eyes of the conthe chair, and, in compliment to the Ladies present, Mrs. Martha Modish and Miss Fanny Furbelow were nominated as as secretary for the evening.

Mr. Rum-one, as soon as order could be obtained, rose from the chair, and gracefully waving his right arm to enchain the attention of the audience, began, " Ladies and Gentlemen, it has been often a source of the deepest regret to me, that in this, our famous city, there should exist no society, to whom the importations of fashion, from France and England, should be consigned, and from whose flat and example the Bloods and would-be Exquisites of the lower orders, should adopt their costume. In London there flourishes such a society, from the ingenuity and judgment of whose members originate every new design, while their power is so universally acknowledged and their displeasure so deeply dreaded, that no person of fashion, however outlawed by the society, dare introduce any innovation in the established cut. I now beg leave briefly to state the object of myself and friends in calling this meeting, which I feel happy to find so numerously attended, it is to protrance of Burleigh-Park, which is on the outside of it. The gates flew open, the chaise entered, and drove down the long tentions to the one now existant in the pose for your consideration the formation of metropolis of Great Britain. As I conceive the exertions of the Ladies will be ance to seek in the novelfies of some dis-prised where they were going, he said, requisite in carrying the plan into effect, tant and new abode that happiness which "Well, my dear, this is Burleigh-House, should any of them coincide in my ideas tom

The moment the president had taken his chair, Miss Susan Spencer and Miss Biddy Blue-hose both sprang to their feet, when the chair having decided the floor in possession of the latter Lady, she commenced-" Such a society was not only well calculated to answer an admirable purpose, but it was absolutely necessary something of the kind should be established to preside in the republic of Fushion, and also to take cognizance of the rank of those who appeared in our streets arrayed in the newest mode. She deplored as a lamentable truth, that no sooner was an improvement established in any article of clothing, but every Laundry and Chambermaid appeared on the promenade in it, thus keeping the inventions of the leaders of Fashion eternally on the rack to devise something new. Such glaring facts (she continued) called peremptorily for reform. She therefore concluded by moving that a committee be appointed to devise some regulations for the government of said society, and report them at our next meeting, and that power be given to said committee to fix upon a suitable designation for the embrye society."

The above question was carried by an unanimous vote, and the meeting adjourned until Friday, the 27th inst. having previously instructed the Secretary to make such an arrangement with Messrs. Atkinson & Alexander, the editors of the Saturday Evening Post, for publishing their proceedings as he should think proper.

THE DERANGED PARROT.

Certain physiologists have asserted, that madness was one of the privileges of human nature; that the instinct of animals, being surer than our reason, was likewise more solid, and that their brain was not so liable to get out of order, I answer this by the sneedote of the Parrot of M. de Bougainville, which was as completely convicted of lunacy, as ever was an inhabitant of Bedlam or Charenton. This bird less remarkable for its plumage than its chattering, was for two years on of luney, as ever was an inhabitant of Bedlam or Charenton. This bird bear remarkable for its plumage than its chattering, was for two years on board the ship of that celebrated navigator, and a great favorite with the officers, to whose amosement he very much contributed. Having one day had an engagement with an enemy's vessel, during which the cannounding had been extremely sharp, it was found that Kokoly, the Parrot, had disappeared, and though the most disgent nearch was made for him, he was no where to be found.—If was supposed he had fallen by the wind, it not by the blow of a bullet; but to the great surpose of the whole crew he was seen two days afterwards, coming out of the cable tier, where it appeared he coming out of the cable tier, where it appeared he had hid himself.

His re-appearance excited the greatest joy, and almonds and carcases were most produgally bestowed upon him; but K-kolyjwas entirely resensible to these demonstrations of kindness, and looking around him with a most rtupid stare imaginable, answered all the questions put to him only, by an imitation of the noise that had so much frightened him;—poum!—poum!—were the only sounds be could pronounce! I myself saw this unfortunate bird twenty years after the combat, perched upon a stick in an antichamber, represting his eternal cannonade, and accompanying it with a beating of his head, and fluttering of his wings, in which his fright was still depicted.

Gibbon's appreciation of his own character. "May 8th, 1762.—This was my bethday, on which I entered into the twentysixth year of my age. This gave me occagregated world. ROGER RUM-ONE, Esq. a sion to look a little into myself, and co . Grecian of the first water, was called to sider impartially my good and bad qualities. It appeared to me, upon this inquiry, that my character was virtuous, inca-pable of a base action, formed for generous ones, but that it was proud, violent and his supporters, Samuel Scribe officiating disagreeable in society. These qualities I must endeavour to cultivate, extupate, or restrain, according to their diff ren !endency. Wit I have none. My imagination is rather strong than pleasing. memory both capacious and retentive.— The shining qualities of my understanding are extensiveness and penetration, but I want both quickness and exactness."

See Gibbon's Miscellaneous Works.

Cheerfulness and hilarity, when unprovoked by unwholesome incentives, undegraded by brutality, or untainted by licentiousness; instead of being interdicted as a crime, ought to be prescribed as one of the means of urging a lazy circulation. A man may be merry upon principle, and occasionally take a laugh, as others do a walk, for the benefit of his health. A celebrated Italian comedy turns altogether upon a stratagem to cure a hypochondriac by making him laugh. It is much in our power to look on the sunny side of things, instead of keeping the eye constantly fixed on the darkened hemisphere of human life. There is no faculty of the mind which it is of more consequence should be exercised and cultivated from the earliest youth than that of self-control. This power is to be improved by exercise as well as that of the memory or the muscles.

LATEST FROM EUROPE.

By the arrival of the packet ship Amity, Capit Maxwell, at New-York, in 38 days from Livery papers of that place to the 16th, and Le dates to the 14th of August have been received.

The most important intelligence furnished by this arrival, is the death of the Marquis of London-lerry, (late Lord Castleveagh) who committed suicide on the morning of the 12th of August, by opening an artery in his neck with a pen-knite. From the time this metancholy event was known until the sailing of the Amity, it entirely occupied the public attention, almost to the exclusion even of the royal visit to Sootland.

Lord Londonderry was oertainly an extraordinaof the royal visit to Scotland.

Lord Londonderry was certainly an extraordinary man, and an able statesman. It has been his lot to guide the ship of state during perhaps the most critical and important crisis that the civilized world has seen; and through his long service in the Ministry, he has shown great courage, energy, talent and skill.—" Withatever difference of opinion has been entertained with respect to his public character (says the editor of the Courier) there is but one sentiment, one opinion with respect to his private one: it was the most affectionate and engaging; the most affectionate husband to the most amiable wife; the most polite and band to the most amiable wife; the most polite and finished gentleman; the kindest landlord; the most mild and indulgent master; beneficent to the poor; and so affable, that every man, however inferior his rank, felt himself at his ease the moment he addressed him. In his friendships, he had all the constancy and ardour that so eminently adorned the character of Mr. Pitt. He had all his dised the character of Mr. Pitt. He had all his dis-interestedness, all his contempt of every selfish feeling, all his devotedness and attachment to the interests and welfare of the empire." In quoting this passage, the Liverpool Mercury, shhough a fierce Radical paper, adds, "It is but canded to add, that this favourable character of the deceased accords with the reports which have been uniform-ty in circulation researches. he Marquis, at the time of his death, was in the

The Marquis, at the time of his death, was in the 55d year of his age.

The following is a copy of the verdict of the Jury of Inquest on the late Marquis:—

"That on Monday, August 12, and for some time previously, the Most Noble Robert, Marquis of Londonderry, under a grievous disorder did labour and languish, and became, in consequence delirious and of insane mind; and that which in that state, with a knife of iron and steel, he did inflict on himself, on the left side of his neck, and of the carotid attery, a wound of one inch in length. of the carotid artery, a wound of one inch in length, and half an inch in depth, of which he instantly died; and that no other person except himself was the cause of his death

The death of the Marquis of Londonderry, may have an important effect upon the political con-cerns of Europe. He was to have been at the Royal and Imperial Congress; and he has unques-tionably been very influential in preventing an open upture between the Russians and Turks.

The King of Persia, it is said, has been recently converted to Christianity by the arguments of the celebrated missionary, Martin. Such a conversion must have an important effect in spreading the lights of the Gospel through regions of darkness, ignorance and idolatry.

It is believed in the best informed political circles that Sir Charles Stuart will succeed Lord Londonderry, as Foreign Secretary. But it is stated that Lord Liverpool intends to make it a sine qua non, that Mr. Canning shall have the management of the House of Commons.

The King of England embarked for Scotland on the 10th of August, and was expected to land in Scotland on the 14th.

The London Gazette of Tuesday the 6th inst. informs us that the Lord Chamberlain has appointed the Hon. Wm. Pole Tilney Long Wellesley gentleman usher daily waiter to his Majesty. Thus, after extravagantly squandering his wife's immense fortune, he may return from his covert in France without fear of arrest by his creditors. A worthy application of the Royal patronage

A fleet from Spanish America had arrived at tadiz, which had lost 20 men by the yellow fever on the passage. Great alarm prevailed in consequence of this arrival. The ships remained in the road, at a great distance from the port. Two persons died of the yellow fever at Barcelona, on the 21st of July.

The Paris journals state that the arcontinue to carry on the war with vigor.

The king has conferred the order of Denmark.

On the 10th of August, the Hercules steam boat, on her passage from Greenoch to Campbeltown, ran foul of a boat filled with poor people from the Highlands on their way to the southern districts to labour during harvest. Out of 45 persons, 5 only escaped, and one of them has since died.

A meeting has been held at Edinburgh, and was well attended, to afford relief to the suffering Greeks, and the Dutch journals, announce that subscriptions for the relief of the Irish continue to be received by the church warders of Amsterdam.

The largest plate-glass manufactory in London, near the western entrance of the London docks, has been destroyed by fire. Loss estimated at one hundred thousand pounds sterling.

A steam boat called the Rising Star, of 70 horse power, and 400 tons, had sailed from England for South America.

Sir S. Achmuty, commander in chief of the Irish forces, dropped suddenly from his horse in the Phænix Park, Dublin, on the 12th ult. and instantly expired.

Shelley, the infidel poet, lately died at sea in a storm, off the coast of Italy. He had been in Pisa, and was returning to his country abode at Lerici.

THE GREEKS.

The most favorable accounts continue to be received of this oppressed and interesting people. It appears from an official acthat the damage sustained in the Turkish fleet by the fire ships, was much greater than is represented in the accounts previously received. Besides the Captain Pacha's ship, three others of the line were burnt and sunk, and seven frigates forced on shore, the crews of most of which perished. The victors immediately detached a part of their squadron to the succour of Candia, which was in danger of falling in-to the power of the Turks, and completely succeeded in the enterprize. Napoli de Romania had capitulated, and the Turkish garrison was to be transported in French and English vessels. According to the report of the Turks themselves, their fleet consisted of 55 sail before the disaster at Scio, and after it had been joined by the expedition which left Constantinople on the 4th of June. On the 7th of July there were only 25 vessels; consequently 20 were missing.

On the intelligence reaching Constantinople of the catastrophe of the fleet, it was felt like an electric shock, in which the Sultan and Divan participated; and such was its effect on the inhabitants, that the Grand Seignior is said to have ordered some hundreds of Greeks to be publicly put to death, in order to prevent the former from committing the crime of murder.

Disturbance at Port-au-Prince.

Mr. T. D Johnston, supercargo of the schr. La ving, arrived at Baltimore, gives an account of serious disturbance which took place at Peter Prince a few days before he sailed, and which is confirmed by the following article translated from the Official Telegraph-extra-

Powr at Pairsex, Sept. 1.

On Friday last, the 30th of August, public traquility was for a short time disturbed in this capital by an unexpected event. The citizen Dutar repaired to the Chamber of Representatives and presented a memorial which aimed at the destruction of our institutions and the revolution of the state. This man, well known as possessing a seditious and dissatisfied character, has evinced in this circumstance that he would stop short at arthing when agitating a conspiracy against the gavernment and the prosperity of the Republicto with horror and contempt by a great majoring of the members of the Chamber. The people, having understood the contents of the memorial, sallied forth in crowds into different parts of the city without any order from government, and ar-rested the citizens Darfour, Beranger, Laborde, Pune, Andre, Noe, Peron, St. Martin and St. La-ment. These men, accused of conspiring against the government, have been conducted so the prison of the city, where they will have a speedy trial. When that has taken place, the public will be informed of all the particulars of this unfurtunate circumstance.

Capt. Kennedy, of the schr. Lapwing, states that the Rachel and Sally, Ervin, of Philadelphia from Maranham with her outward cargo on board, was plundered on her passage to Port-au-Prince, off the Platform, by a piratical schr. of about fifty ton, manned with negroes and Spaniards.

The two victims to the dangerous insanity of the prisoner Trask, who morially wounded them on the 6th inst bave expired. Francis Duggar died on Tuesday, and John Newman, vesterday in the county jail. Since the attack made by Trask aron his fellow prisoners, he has been in solitary confinement, and chained to the floor of his room; but the instrument with which he killed his comations has never been discovered. On Monday ght last, being without any known instrument assist him, he broke from the fetters which con-Good his hands and the collar that encircled his neck, and fractured them into eight or nine different pieces. His hand-cuffs were made after the herent pieces. His hand-cuffs were made after the madel of those used on board of ships—consisting of curved irons for the wrists, running on a straight cylindrical bolt, stopped at one end by a large head, and fastened at the other by a stout pin, eletched by means of a hammer. An Iron collar about an inch and a half broad, and near a quarter of an underthick, was connected with the chains about an inch and a half broad, and near a quarter of an inch thick, was connected with the chains that secured his legs, and was fastened by a bolt. His collar was broken in several pieces, which were, some of them, twisted like a cork screw. There was no mark of a sharp instrument on any of the fragments, but the fractures indicated the exertion of main strength. The bolt belonging to the hand cuffs was broken short off near to one of the ends—and the running irons were twisted in various ways and broken. The whole was effected without any laceration of the flesh, but the grists of the maniac appeared to be swollen. He has since been confined with a double set of handcuffs and a stronger collar.

most difficult fractures in the fetters were effected after the release of his hands and neck from their enclosures, in order to increase the wonder of his pailors. He probably, in the first instance, extricated the bolt and collar from their fastenings, and then, by a most wonderful exertion of human power and ingenuity, broke them into fragments.

FROM A LIVERPOOL PAPER The Albion .- The bodies of two more of the unfortunate passengers lost by the wreck of this vessel near Garrestown-stand some time since have been picked-up; one that of Col. Proctor, on Sunday, the 21st ult. near the Old Head of Kinsale, and, which is very remarkable, after baving been so many weeks in the water, very little disfigured or decayed, but soon after it was brought ashore it evinced symptoms of decomposition. The identity was ascertainud by some papers and a card bearing his name which were found in his pocket, together with a sovereign, another gold coin, and a small case with a lock of hair tied up in it. The body of the other unfortunate person was extremely mutilated, and nothing was found on it which could lead to identification. Mr. Gibbons, the agent of Lloyd's at Kinsale, caused both the corpses to be interred near the spot where the other bodies had been deposited which were washed ashore or picked up immediately after the calamity.

PIRACY & MURDER .- In the Kingston, Jamaica Chrosicle, of the 3d of August, there is a detailed account of a piracy and murder, attended with very aggravated circumstances. A boat was picked up at sea, with 4 men on board, belonging to the sloop Blessing, capt. Smith, which on a fourth voyage from St. Jago de Cuba to Jamaica, was fallen in with by a piratical vessel, com-manded by a white man, with a mixed crew of colour and countries, among whom were English or Americans.

After bringing the slosp too, the pirates took out the captain and his son, with all the crew, and carried them on board of the schr. leaving the sloop in possession of his people; he then delife. The captain stated that he had no sun all in white in the centre. The colours money, but profered him the cargo, of Merchantmen to be the same as the na-which consisted of one hundred barrels tional, three stripes. of flour, and fifty tierces of corn meal. On the following day, not producing any money, a plank was run out in the starboard side of the sehr. upon which the pirate made capt. Smith walk, and as he approached to the end, they tilted the plank, when he dropt into the sea, and when in the effort of swimming, the piratical captain called for his musket, and discharged it at him, when he sunk, and was seen no more! The rest of the crew were ironed below, with the exception of his son, a boy about 14, who witnessed the fate of his father. In the agony of tears and crying, the captain took the but-end of his musket, and knocked the boy on the head; thereafter took him by the foot, and hove him overboard. On the following day, having previously taken out all the rigging, sails, &c. of the sloop, the pirate set her on fire, and burnt her; and on the same day, gave the crew, consisting of four persons (having stript them of every article but what was on their backs,) the jolly boat, with a bucket of water, and one biscuit each person, without compass, and told them to be off, or he would sink them. In the afternoon of the same day, the boat was picked up by the schr. Mary Ann, belonging to Black River, and the crew landed at Port Morant, on the 18th July.

In falling his head struck a rock. He had rected the scaffold himself a few minutes before the melancholy accident. He has left a wife and several children to lament his loss.

Squirrels.-These destructive animals are stated to be making great ravage among the corn in Ohio. Myriads of them were found in every direction, and it was feared many of the farmers would lose the whole of their crops. Several hunting par-ties had been formed, and in many instances thousands of them have been destroyed, but still their numbers did not appear to be in the least diminished. Great quantiand stones, and they were literally throng-ing the streets and house tops of the vil-

The Arkansas Gazette says that settlements were commenced in the Texas as early as 1660, and had an independent Spanish government. A few years since there were but three towns in ith whole extent, 800 leagues in length and 100 in breadth. The towns of San Antonio, La Bahia, and Nacogdoches, have gone to de-cay since 1812. It is calculated that there may once have been 7000 souls in Texas, but in 1820, it was doubtful whether there were 4000.

New Flag .- The State of Peru, has established a new flag. It consists of three stripes; the two exterior stripes of carnstion red, and a white one between them.-In the centre of the white stripe will be a sun in carnation red; the superior flag, or manded of the captain his money or his flag of the State, a carnation red, with a Awful Calamity.—The following melancholy circumstances occurred last week in the town of Oreslie, in Chenango county, N.Y. A large number of men were employed in raising a harn; two young men were scuffling, and the neck of one was broken in the affray; in this situation he was carried before his father, who was holding a corner post of one of the bents; when (dreadful to relate!) the father, shocked at the horrid spectacle, left his hold, by which means the timbers fell and killed seven men on the spot!

Volcano of Clay.—A very remarkable phenomenon has lately attracted the Sicilians and travellers to the eastern declivity of Æina. It is a volcano of clay, which has burst forth in a plain at 200 ms. 200 paces from the sea. The crater does not ex-ceed two and a half feet; the slimy clay speuts up, rises six or seven feet and spreads itself in such a manner, that at a mile's distance, it forms a marsh or slough. This clay is excellent for pottery.

STANZAS-TO MISS

Say, with fortune's smiles propitious, Where's the moment we can claim, Brighter, sweeter, more delicious, Hallowed by a nobler flame.

When in Beauty's blaze of splendour, Brightened by the morn of youth, We a sacred vow can tender, Plighted on the fane of truth.

Yes and while through life a ranger, Time has passed on joyous wing, Wafting too, an eastern stranger, Blooming like the rose of spring,

Still those roses he may nourish, They alone I cannot prize, Nor can faithful Friendship flourish, Only from thy di'mond eyes.

But that charm .- I'll ne'er deceive thee, Which a polished mind beatows, Cannot, will not, shall not leave thee, Like thy morning's fairest rose

And, could I, (will fortune bless me)
That bright flow'ret's guardian be,
What though storms and tempests press me,
Still through all I'd look to thee.

But should fortune round us sporting, Wast her gifts on downy wing, I will then her favour courting, In thy path her roses fling.

Here's the harp, whose chords now brokes,
Then might sound with nobler swell,
Here's its warm and honest token,
Ere thou bid'st thy long farewell.

The ship Tennessee, capt. Hamilton, belonging to this port, was cast away on the 20th of July, five leagues to the eastward of Montevideo. Mr. Hockley, the supercargo, and one seaman were drowned. The beach was for miles strewed with the wreck, and cargo. A part of the latter had been saved and brought to Montevideo.

HEALTH OF BALTIMORE.

The following report of the interments in that city was made to the Health Office for the last week, ending the 23d inst.—total 97—of which one was of typhus, and thirty-six of bilious fever! Is it not singular that such great mortality should pregail from bilious fever! We understand that it is principally confined to Fell's Point; the place if we are not mistaken, where the malignant fever prevailed a year or two ago. If it is the same kind of bilious fever which at that time proved so fatal, does not justice require that its appropriate name should be given it?

[Mr. T. Moore has lately published a third number of the National Melodies, equal, if not superior, in all respects, to either of the two former ones. We subjoin from it the following song adapted to a Venetian air. It is of that kind in which he pre-eminently excels.-Paul Allen.

SONG.

Bow gently here, my gondolier, So softly wake the tide, That not an ear on earth may hear But her's to whom we glide. But her's to whom we glide. Had Heaven but tongues to speak, as well As starry eyes to see, Oh think! what tales 'twould have to tell Of wandering youth like me.

Now rest thee here, my gondolier!
Hush! hush! for up I go,
To climb you light balcony's height,
Whilst thou keep'st watch below.
Old did we take for heaven above,
But half such pains as we
Take, day and night, for woman's love,
What angels we should be What angels we should be.

EARLY RISING.

The morning of every day is the be ginning of every man's life. One of your greatest errors-for I know you well and do not mean to flatter you-one of your greatest errors is, that you do not seize upon these beginnings of your life so early as you might do. You lived yesterday, in-deed, to a good old age, and died last night after the powers of your mind and body were entirely exhausted. But I must remind you, my friend, that you have spent the greater part of the youth of this day in the state of the dead. The great busi-ness of your life was up before you; you have been running after it this whole afternoon, and I am afraid you will never overtake it till old age overtakes you.

PITTING THE HEAD.

In a trial which lately took place in the court of common pleas, London, where the plaintiff was a tailor, and the defendant an insolvent man of tashion, the following disclosure took pisce:
Counsel-" Were there two of the coats that

Witness-" They did not fit the head." Counsel-" The head! I thought coats were usually made to fit the body?"

Witness begged he might not be compelled to disclose secrets of trade. The question was

Witness-" We often make coats which fit exwiness—"We often make coats which it ex-tremely well, but some fault is found, and they are sent back to be altered. In such a case, we say they do not fit the head." We keep them a proper time, and then send them back untouched, when they are found to be just the thing, and to fit delightfully."

A HIGH AUTHORITY.

Mr. Curran was once engaged in a legal argument; behind him stood his colleague, a gentleman whose person was remarkably tall and slender, and who had originally intended to take orders. The Judge observed that the case under discussion involved a question of ecclesiastical law-"Then," said Curran, "I can refer your lordship to a high authority behind me, who was once intended for the church, though, in my opinion, he was fitter for the steeple."

In a certain town, not more than fifty miles from tou, as the clergyman was holding forth in his busicion is the elergyman was holding forth in his usual drowsy manner, one of the Deacons, probably influenced by the nareotic qualities of the discourse, fell into a doze. The preacher happening to use the words, What is the price of all earthly pleasures? The good Deacon, who kept a small store, thinking the enquiry respecting some kind of merchandize, immediately answered, seven and streems a dozen.
